(Washington Correspondence of The Hawaiian Star.) WASHINGTON, D. C., October 16,-Personally, Alice Roosevelt's husband-beg pardon-Representative "Nick" Longworth, is a mighty fine fel- with special music for the occasion. low; politically he is a dub. That is why Nick, in a recent speech, now famous, undertook to joke with his audience about his father-in-law re- tion. turning to the Presidency in 1916. Had Longworth been possessed of even the normal amount of political sagacity, he would have steered away from that delicate subject; a subject especially to be tabooed in the present campaign, when the President is being condemned, not for any desire of returning to the White House, but because of his exertions in behalf of Mr. Taft. Of course throughout the West, the more active the President becomes the better the people like it, but back in the East there are many Republicans who have, as they say, had "too much Roosevelt" and they shudder to think of the possibility of Longworth's wife's father ever being elected again. Among this class Longworth, with his little joke, did no good, and the Ewa-makal corner of King and Bethel at 1 o'clock this afternoon, listening to a Hawalian speech, Sheriff laukea was observed wheeling a huge crate to the corner in front of the shoe store. Mounting thereon he opened to election as anyone on the ticket, said English, bidding the mob to gather deserted and went to hear the man Cooperation of the cooperation pendently.

He proclaimed that Wise was running for Sheriff on the Republican ticket merely for the sake of politics in office and that Jarrett, though a popular young man, was too inexperienc ed to resist the avalanche of demands that would be made on him for politi cal favors. Therefore he, laukea, was the man to vote for, the man who had made per cent more criminal arrest than the Brown administration and whose work had resulted in a thou sand more convictions than obtained when A. M. Brown was Sheriff.

It the voters wanted to be damaed fools, let them vote for Wise, If Jarrett was elected he would be advised to reinstate such men as Turrill and Harry Juen, mea whom he, laukea, had fired because they frequented saloons and associated with gamblers in hours of duty.

"You're a very poor citizen, in my estimation!" cried laukea. "Tell the truth!" yelled Levy, jump ing up and down. Some drunk passed in the crowd and called out that Wise had no ring in

Then Mary Atcherley got up on the platform across the way and a double main-event performance was under way. The Atcherley drew away some of laukea's crowd. They both talked at once. Iaukea laughed and proceeded. He said that John Wise had been prevented from grafting when he was clerk of the House only by the ionest vigilance of the chairman, Hoistein. He also said Wise had been designed for a churchman, but had villified the people who gave him educational opportunities.

He urged the voters to cast their votes for him Jaukea, and for what ne said would continue to be an honest

It was not funny, to begin with; there was no occasion for talking about what is going to happen eight years hence—a subject with which Mr. Longworth (being a mortal) is not familiar, and it was decidedly bad judgment to open up a question that would give the Democrats further occasion for criticising and denouncing the President. As a strmp speaker, Nick Longworth is not a brilliant success.
